Alpine Region Celebrates Spring With Festivals

by Kirby Clark

Music woke me. Drums, flutes, and cymbals. It seemed like a dream. But when I leaned out of the dormer window, men in traditional costumes were parading past my hotel.

Within minutes I was dressed and following them, as were clusters of rosy-cheeked children and their elders. Many villagers wore the dignified trachten that is the region's tradition: dark knickers on the men and dark skirts on women, with vest and bodices painstakingly embroidered. Headdress is also special, and varies from village to village.

In front of the church, the town's band and its followers joined with families gathering for their young ones' First Communion. In Catholic communities, the celebration is heartfelt --and the church would ring with singing and bells as soon as the service began. Afterwards, everyone gathered in the town square --for conversation and picture-taking. We few visitors were welcomed--and enchanted!

When you travel through the Alpine region, festivals are never far from view, especially in springtime when villagers throw off their winter blanket of snow and welcome the first signs of warmer weather.

Easter (March 26th) is always a cause for celebration, but Alpine communities also focus on sports and music for their fun and festivals. Before leaving for the Alpine countries of Austria, Germany, Italy, Switzerland, and Yugoslavia, send to their Alpine Tourist Commission (Section 189, Box 1137, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10101), for a free copy of "Events 1989." Although it doesn't list every event, it does include many of the major ones. To find out what's going on when you get there, ask your hotel and the local tourist office.

For example, Austria's "Schubert Festival," a musical event, takes place from June 17th to July 2nd in Hohenems, in the province of Vorarlberg, the finger of Austria that stretches toward Switzerland and Germany.

And the church square at Mariahilf, in Germany's Munich, takes on the personality of a small town when the "Maidult" is held at the end of April. Primarily a flea market, the fair features food, crafts, antiques, and brick-a-brack from the countryside.

May Day is a cause for celebration in many Alpine villages, where an intricate May Pole, often decorated with symbols of village significance, stretches into the sky from the town green. Villagers hold dances and festivities around its base.

The town church, or its square, is often the focal point for festivities. For example, on May 15th, Italy's Gubbio celebrates its "Festa dei Ceri" or "race of the candles." Local folk wear traditional costumes for the procession, as they carry handmade shrines to the church at the top of Mount Ingino.

In addition to the church calendar and musical events, there are many sports events as well.

The 21st Engadine Marathon, a Swiss ski event that draws thousands, takes place from Maloja to Zuoz on March 12. Passing near well-known resorts such as St. Moritz and Pontresina, the marathon is exhilarating (and exhausting) for participants--and thrilling to watch.

Yugoslavia's northern republic of Slovenia is where the International Ski Jumping event is held (in Planica) at the end of March and a May Day Rowing Regatta is held (in Bled) on April 30th and May 1st.

Because distances are short, and trains, buses, and often boats make efficient links, it is easy to get from any city pausing place into the country for a village event. Be sure to ask when you arrive, so as not to miss the chance to join in a centuries-old celebration.
